THE DEAD PRESIDENT
HIS LAST HOURS.
SCENES AND INCIDENTS.
THE FEELING IN WASHINGTON.

The President died at 10:35 o'clock last night. The announcement of his death came with a shock, as the public, encouraged by the favorable tenor of the dispatches received during the evening, were unprepared for such news. The excitement of the day had died out, and people were disposed to believe that the President would overcome the pending crisis, even if he succumbed to succeeding ones. Many who have hoped against hope through the darkest hours of the President's brave struggle for life were encouraged by the evening bulletin to believe that he had a new chance for life. Most of the people had retired for the night. When the news came, sudden and terrible, it stirred the whole city as nothing ever stirred it before. The tolling bells summoned the sleeper from his bed, and the mournful, musical, solemn tones breaking the silence of midnight, penetrated to the cell of the assassin, like a summons to judgment. The news, so unexpected, though every one believed he was prepared for the worst, gave a shock as fearful as the report of the assassin's pistol on the fatal Saturday, nearly three months ago.

Last Night's Dispatches.

THE SCENES AROUND ELBERON—SCANTY PARTICULARS OF THE SAD EVENT.
After the death last night the Associated Press sent the following dispatch from Long Branch: "Previous to his death the only words spoken by the President were that he had a severe pain in his heart. It is supposed by the surgeons that death was occasioned by a clot of blood forming on the heart. Dr. Bliss was the first one notified of the President's expression of pain and he called on him at once. He said that the end was near. The members of the family were immediately summoned to the bedside. All arrived and perfect quiet prevailed. The President lay on his back, with great fortitude, and exhibited unprecedented courage. He gave way to no paroxysms of grief, and after death became evident, his quietude was maintained until the end. He was a heart-broken widow, full of grief, but with too much Christian courage to exhibit it to those around her. The end was a long and painful one, and, despite her efforts, tears flowed from her eyes, and her lips became drawn by her noble attempt to bear the burden with which she had been afflicted. She was naturally greatly affected, and bursts of tears flowed from her child's eyes notwithstanding her noble effort to follow the example of her mother.

THE DEATH SCENE

was no never to be forgotten. Perfect quiet prevailed, and there was no murmur heard while the President was sinking. After death had been pronounced the body was properly arranged by Dr. S. A. Boynton. Telegrams were immediately sent to the President's mother in Ohio and to the President's father in New York. The President's body was taken to the residence of the President's mother, where it was placed in a coffin. The President's body was taken to the residence of the President's mother, where it was placed in a coffin.

THE INQUEST

Eugene Britton, of Long Branch, the coroner of Monmouth county, was inquired of by the body of the late President. He has as yet made no arrangements for the inquest, and, as far as can be ascertained, he has not yet been notified of the death of the President. The body of the President was taken to the residence of the President's mother, where it was placed in a coffin.

THE FUNERAL

Arrangements for the funeral will be made in all respects in accordance with the wishes of Mrs. Garfield. Nothing has yet been definitely determined upon, but it is expected that a special train will leave here on Wednesday for Washington, and the President's remains will lie in state in the rotunda of the Capitol during Thursday and Friday. On Friday evening it is expected that the body will be taken to Cleveland, where it will lie in state during Sunday, and the funeral will be held on Monday. The place of interment will be Lake View Cemetery, at Cleveland, in accordance with the frequently expressed wish of the President in his lifetime.

THE VICE PRESIDENT'S SYMPATHY.

The following telegram was received by Attorney General MacVeagh:
NEW YORK, Sept. 19.
Hon. WAYNE MACVEAGH, Long Branch:
I have your telegram and the intelligence fills me with profound sorrow. Express to Mrs. Garfield my deepest sympathy.

HOW THE NEWS WAS TOLD.

A general dispatch said the President died at 10:35. From what can be ascertained his death was from sheer exhaustion. Mr. Warren Young, assistant to Private Secretary Brown, brought the news from the cottage at 10:50 o'clock. The first indication that anything serious had occurred was the appearance of a messenger at the Elberon Hotel, who obtained a conveyance and drove rapidly off. It is supposed he had gone to inform members of the Cabinet, who left here about half-past nine to-night. Attorney General MacVeagh notified Vice President Arthur of the President's demise.

THE EXCITEMENT AT ELBERON.

A dispatch dated at 11:15 p.m. said: "The Cabinet has just arrived and gone in a body to the Franklin cottage. All are here except Secretary Blaine and Lincoln. Attorney General MacVeagh has telegraphed the latter two, who are now en route to Long Branch, of the President's death. Great excitement prevails here, and particulars cannot be obtained. The guard around the cottage has been doubled, and no one is allowed to approach it. The government has possession of the only telegraph line which is connected with Elberon. It will be almost impossible to get further details to-night, as we are shut off from all communication with the cottage and its inmates."

The Last Moments.

THE CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE DEATH AS RELATED BY ATTORNEY GENERAL MACVEAGH.
A dispatch from Elberon, dated at 11:20 p.m., said: Attorney General MacVeagh just came to the Elberon Hotel from the Franklin cottage, VOL. 58—No. 8,880.

and made the following statement: "I sent my dispatch to Minister Lowell at 10 p.m. Shortly before that Dr. Bliss had seen the President and found his pulse at 100 beats per minute, and the conditions were such that a quiet night, the doctor asked the President if he was feeling uncomfortable in any way. The President answered 'Not at all, and shortly afterward the doctor left. Dr. Bliss returned to his room across the hall from that occupied by the President. Cois. Swain and Rockwell remained with the President. About fifteen minutes after the President awoke and remarked to Col. Swain that he was suffering great pain, and placed his hand over his heart. Dr. Bliss was summoned, and when he entered the room he found the President lying on his back, with his hands clasped over his heart. The President remained in a dying condition until 10:35, when he was pronounced dead. He died of some trouble of the heart, supposed to be neuralgia."

THE FINAL DISPATCH.

In answer to an inquiry, last night, the Attorney General said that the first dispatch after the death occurred was sent to the late President's father, and that the second dispatch was sent to the other relatives.

HOW THE DOCTORS MADE THE MOURNFUL ANNOUNCEMENT.

The last of the famous "official bulletins" was issued at 1:15 o'clock this morning, and made the mournful announcement that the end had come, in the following words:

ELBERON, N. J., Sept. 19, 11:30 p.m.—The President died at 10:35 o'clock last night. The President died at 10:35 o'clock last night. The President died at 10:35 o'clock last night.

information, however, it is believed that the President's family had been fully warned. Every member who was in the cottage at the time was present fully ten minutes before death came. All sources of information were quickly cut off, and the few who knew the details were not in a condition to give the information at the moment, and acquiesced in the silence. The President was quickly and promptly shut off. The first announcement of the death was made by Mr. Warren Young, of the Elberon. This announcement was followed in a very few moments by a rumor that the President was sinking rapidly. Death had already taken place when the rumor of the new trouble was first heard. His condition had been such that the cottage had been closed and most of the newspaper men had gone back to the West End. Some of them were already in bed, with the exception of a few who remained in the cottage early in the morning, and even Dr. Hamilton was of the opinion that death was not imminent. He was not within call, and not present when the death occurred. The newspaper men who were present started to get the details, only to find that the line of guards had been extended to a considerable distance from the cottage. The line could not be approached or passed; that Captain Ingalls, who was in command, had received positive orders that all passes issued up to that hour had been declared void, and no one was to be admitted. The most trustworthy of the first information came from unusual sources. Mr. Jones, of the Elberon, was standing on the cottage steps when the news first got to him. He had heard and heard the conversation of the outer household. He said the whole family had known of the death, and that the President himself was still conscious, or apparently so, although it was not known that he had spoken or even recognized any one. Mrs. Garfield, Miss Mollie Garfield, Col. Rockwell, Gen. Swain and Dr. Bliss and Agnew were present during the entire time, but none of them left the house immediately afterwards, and the only one to enter was Dr. Hamilton. It is understood that for a long time it has been Mrs. Garfield's wish that the family should have all possible privacy, and the information to the public should be given in a dignified and proper manner.

derers the guilty assassin has been made the martyr rather than the victim. They aver that one victim of Lynch law in the west has been conducive of greater safety to human life, and preventative of murder, than all the hangings in the eastern states. They think that a course other than the usual one should be adopted in the punishment of Gaitreau for crime, in order to satisfy the conscience of an injured nation, and serve as an example in future to curb the baser passions of all who aspire to become notorious by assassinating the ruler of the country. The vengeance has just unanimously resolved that one of their number be chosen by ballot, whose duty it shall be to devote his whole time and energy to carrying out the execution of the executed plan, and while the one chosen must act at the risk of his life, it must be with the consciousness that his life is not too dear to sacrifice in order to punish a just man. The duty of the chosen one is to imbue his hands with the nation's best blood. It is understood that the person selected to murder Gaitreau will be unknown to his fellow members of the committee, who, it would seem, have absolute power.

That Mr. Garfield, in the House of Representatives, after prayer by Charles H. Johnson, moved to dispense with the reading of the Journal, and said: "Mr. Speaker, I desire to move that this House do now adjourn. And before the vote on this motion is taken, I desire to say to you, Mr. Speaker, that this day will be a day memorable as long as this Nation shall endure, which God grant may be 'till the last syllable of recorded time." When the roll call was taken, the roll was called up and delivered to the Omniscient Judge. In all future time, on the recurrence of this day, I doubt not that the citizens of this Republic will meet in solemn assembly to reflect on the life and character of Abraham Lincoln, and the awful tragic event of April 14, 1865—an event unparalleled in the history of nations, certainly unparalleled in our own. It is eminently proper that this House should this day place upon its records a memorial of that event." After a brief eulogy upon the late President, and a pathetic allusion to the circumstances of his death, Mr. Garfield concluded:

"Sir, there are times in the history of men and nations where they stand so near the veil that the light of the future is almost within their grasp. They are times when the beatings and feel the pulsations of the heart of the Infinite. Through the portals of the future, when the great God of the universe passed from the hold of honor that he thenceforth to the presence of God, and when at last its parting folds admitted the martyr to the presence of the Father. When the great heroes of the republic, the nation stood so near the veil that the whispers of God were heard by the children of men. Awe-struck by Him, the nation bowed its head in kneel in fearful reverence and made a solemn covenant with Him and with each other that this nation should be saved from its enemies, that all its glories should be restored, and the ruins of slavery and treason the temples of freedom and justice should be built and should survive forever. It remains for us, consecrated by that great event, and which the Father has kept to keep that faith, to go forward in the great work until it shall be completed. Following the lead of that great man and obeying the voice of that great God, we must go forward. He has sounded forth a trumpet that shall never call retreat. He is sitting on the hearts of men before His throne, and saying: 'Behold, I am about to do a new thing, and now it begins, O ye that fear me, my work shall be manifest to you.' For God is marching on."

At the conclusion of this peroration the House adjourned.
